Commodity Index Description

The Commodity Index is an absolute return investment product, by which investors can potentially profit from rising but also declining commodity markets. The Commodity Index aims to provide active, efficient and liquid exposure to a set of 25 commodities.

The Commodity Index is an actively managed commodity index which follows an investment strategy based on a quantitative engine designed by BNP Paribas, and recommendations from the Commodity Index Adviser.

Depending on the advice from the Commodity Index Adviser, the Commodity Index takes long or short positions on a subset of the 25 commodities which make up the index.

The Weekly COMAC Target Weights of the Commodity Index are determined by using the results of the seven test scores provided by the Commodity Index Adviser (each a "Score") and:

- 1) Calculating the Success Indicator for each Test provided by the Commodity Index Adviser for each COMAC Commodity; and
- 2) Calculating the Final Score for each COMAC Commodity; and
- 3) Ranking the 25 Final Scores of the COMAC Commodities in the Commodity Index in absolute value in decreasing order, from the highest to the lowest; and
- 4) Deriving the COMAC Unadjusted Weights from the 25 ranked Final Scores, in consideration of the Liquidity Weight of each COMAC Commodity in the Commodity Index; and
- 5) Executing the Leveraged Selection amongst COMAC Commodities in order to maintain the amount invested in absolute value equal or below 200% (200% leverage) under a Sector Cap constraint of 66.67% for each of the three Commodity Sectors (Energy, Metals and Agriculture) and deriving the COMAC Target Weights.
- 6) Reducing the exposure in times of very high volatility for any COMAC Commodity selected in the portfolio which exhibits a temporary volatility spike.

"COMAC Commodity" means each of the Reference Commodities included in the table below.

"COMAC Unadjusted Weight" means the COMAC Commodity Weight before Sector Cap constraints and Leverage Selection constraint..

"Final Score" means the Final Score for each COMAC Commodity of the Commodity Index derived by success-weighting of the seven latest available Tests Scores provided by the COMAC Adviser, calculated using the Success Indicator.

"Liquidity Weight" means the weights defined in the table below.

"Leveraged Selection" means the selection amongst COMAC Commodities in order to maintain the amount invested in absolute value equal or below 200% (200% leverage)

"Sector Cap" means 66.67% for each of the three Commodity Sectors (Energy, Metals and Agriculture).
